

Contributors

David H. Brown received his Ph.D in American Studies from Yale University in 1989 and currently teaches African Diaspora arts and cultures in the Art History Department at Emory University in Atlanta.

Isabel Castellanos is Associate Professor of Linguistics and Spanish Chairperson, Department of Modern Languages, at Florida International University in Miami.

Ysamur M. Flores is a graduate student in the Folklore and Mythology Program, University of California, Los Angeles.

Michael A. Nicklas is a graduate student in the Religious Studies Department, Indiana University.

Karen E. Richman is a graduate student in anthropology at the University of Virginia in Charlottesville.

Hédimo Rodrigues Santana studied anthropology at the Federal University of Bahia in Salvador, Brazil, and currently lives in Washington D.C., where he is engaged in field research for the Anacostia Museum's African American Communities Project.

Jim Wafer is the author of The Taste of Blood: Spirit Possession in Brazilian Condomblé (see review in this volume). He holds a Ph.D. in anthropology from Indiana University, and currently works as a consultant anthropologist in Central Australia.